Industry 4.0 is one of the major drivers of the Fourth Industrial Revolution. The first industrial revolution was powered by steam and water power to move from human labour to mechanical manufacturing. The second industrial revolution built on electric power to create mass production. The third used electronics and information technology to automate manufacturing. The fourth is the current trend of automation and data exchange in manufacturing technologies.

Industry 4.0 or the fourth industrial revolution as it is called, is emerging globally as a powerful force and is being touted as the next industrial revolution. It is characterized by the increasing digitization and interconnection of products, value chains and business models. Industry 4.0 is driven by an amalgamation of emerging technologies like data volumes, computational power, Internet of Things (IoT), business analytics and augmented reality, artificial intelligence, elemental design, simulation, advanced robotics, additive manufacturing, sensor based technologies and cyber-physical systems. Industry 4.0 would mean the convergence of real and virtual worlds - the next phase in integrating together conventional and modern technologies in manufacturing. This will result in the "Smart Factory", which is characterized by versatility, resource efficiency, ergonomic design and direct integration with business partners.

Industry 4.0, to put it briefly, is a mélange of many futuristic and advanced concepts and technologies which have the potential of transforming the production scenario in the 21st century mainly comprising of a 'connected shop floor' where data is collected from various sensors and other input devices to be used for predictive maintenance, better control and long-term analysis.

NEED TO ADOPT INDUSTRY 4.0
Manufacturing today is cutting edge and requires a high level of skill. Today, the global manufacturing sector is undergoing a structural transformation. Though India banks heavily on its Service Scenario in the 21st century, manually, and spiritually, woman is not only the second woman Prime Minister of India, the launched the "Make in India" program to place India on the world map as a manufacturing hub. The Manufacturing Sector especially MSMEs play a pivotal role in the Indian economy and provide the largest share of employment after agriculture. In order to converge the aims of growth with employment it is important to increase the share of manufacturing in the country's Gross Domestic Product from 16% to 25% by 2022 and to create 100 million additional jobs by 2022.

Digital connectivity forms the backbone for adaptation of advanced technologies. With increasing penetration of the internet in India and emergence of e-commerce, presence of enterprises on the internet has become inevitable. Ensuring comprehensive broadband connectivity in industrial clusters, Government of India has launched Digital India Programme with a vision to transform India into a digitally empowered society and knowledge economy.

Smart Factory may be characterised in terms of flexible systems and machines, distribution of functions throughout the network, communication/interaction among all participants across hierarchy, self-optimization and autonomous decision-making. Digital technologies allow for new business models and value-producing opportunities, and are attainable for most developing countries.

JOB OPPORTUNITIES WITH INDUSTRY 4.0
To understand how the industrial workforce will evolve with Industry 4.0, the hypothetical effect of new technologies on the manufacturing landscape was assessed. It was found that by adopting Industry 4.0, manufacturers will be able to increase their competitiveness, which will enable them to expand their business within the same time that productivity increases. As production increases more capital intensive, the labor cost advantages of traditional low-cost locations will shrink, making it attractive for manufacturers to bring production back to the domestic market.

WOMEN ENTREPRENEURS- LEADING THE WAY

“How important it is for us to recognize and celebrate our heroes and sisters”

- Maya Angelou

Observed from the 1900s, International Women’s Day and International Peace is celebrated every year on March 8 in order to focus on the achievements and contributions of the women in the society. India has proudly led the world in ratifying UN Conventions and international covenants like the Convention for the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW) and the Beijing Platform for Action. The earliest celebration is believed to be held at a socialist political event in New York in 1900.

With the widening context of women and their rights across the world, different themes every year address issues that are faced by women. For instance, in 2018, International Women’s Day the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) brought to the world’s attention, the physical and mental hardships displaced women endure, as a result of armed conflicts and humanitarian crisis. The theme of International Women’s Day 2018 campaign is #PressForProgress. International Women’s Day, as the name implies, is a day to celebrate womanhood, their social, political, cultural, economic achievements and their significant contributions to society, while laying importance on gender equality. It asserts the equal freedoms and rights that women have access to like other gender.

Gandhi had said, “Intellectually, mentally, and spiritually, woman is equivalent to a male and she can participate in every activity.” From Sita in Ramayana to Kannagi in Silapathikaram to Rani Jhansi are not only celebrated women but also their contribution to social change and awareness had been immense.

India is fortunate to have had many great women - Aurovay, Annie Besant, First women President of Indian National Congress, Nevedita, Vijaya Lakshmi Pandit, First Indian Woman President of UN General Assembly, Mother Teresa, Sarojini Naidu to Indira Gandhi only the second woman Prime Minister in the world, to Kalpana Chawla, Indra Nooyi to Pratibha Patil first women President of India and many more. In the Indian Corporate sector who have proved to be more than a match. Their contribution to society in whole and so Women in Particular is invaluable.

In Modern Indian society women are playing stellar role, even challenging the counterparts in Politics. More importantly their role in family building, society development is beyond substantial. Indian woman is emerging out of their conventional role, realizing their unlimited potential and have begun to take major role in all walks of life.

Today’s woman is a ‘Superwoman’ who is breaking all the stereotypes and the orthodox moulds and is managing everything single-handedly. But that was not the case in history. And this journey helps us understand the significance of International Women’s Day.

Today’s women are the days when women were considered no match for all powerful men in this world. The new generation women across the world have overcome all negative notions and have proved themselves beyond doubt in all aspects of life including the most intricate and cumbosrsome world of entrepreneurship.

Industry 4.0 ...

Previously offshoreled jobs back home. The adoption of Industry 4.0 will also allow manufacturers to create new jobs to meet the higher demand resulting from the growth of existing markets and the introduction of new products and services. This favorable scenario contrasts with previous eras of technological advancement, during which the number of manufacturing jobs declined despite an increase in overall productivity. According to a paper by P.G. BCG report, the following impacts of Industry 4.0 on workforces are anticipated:

Big-Data-Driven Quality Control: This application of big data in manufacturing will reduce the number of defectives and improve quality assurance processes. It will also automate data collection and reduce the need for human labor. The increased productivity will enable manufacturers to realize significant cost savings and improve competitiveness. Implementation of this technology will increase the demand for technical designers, data analysts, and data engineers.

Robot-Assisted Production: The use of robots to perform repetitive and hazardous tasks will reduce the need for human labor. This will result in higher productivity and improved quality. However, the increased demand for robots and automation will shift the focus from manual labor to technical skills required for maintaining and programming robots. The need for multiple hard skills and the unprecedented scope of change on the shop floor mean that "soft skills" will become more important than ever. Employers will have to be even more open to change, possess greater flexibility to adapt to new roles and work environments, and are more accustomed to continual interdisciplinary learning.

Manufacturing Challenges with Industry 4.0:

There are many challenges which have to be addressed in order to successful adoption of Industry 4.0. Industry 4.0 requires companies to build extensive new capabilities in R&D, IT, and digital assistance systems. A greater use of robotics and computerization will reduce the number of jobs in assembly and production. However, this decline will be more than offset by the creation of new jobs. The job gains will result from demand for highly skilled workers in IT, analytics, and R&D roles, as well as the creation of new jobs related to the type of revenue growth opportunities.

SKILL CHALLENGES WITH INDUSTRY 4.0:

Industry 4.0 will foster significant changes in how industrial workers perform their jobs, and as a result, new job families will be created while others become obsolete. Although the extent to which Industry 4.0, especially robots, will replace human labor remains a matter of debate and need to be carried out with care. One of the trends that is gaining traction is that Industry 4.0 requires companies to build extensive new capabilities in R&D, IT, and digital assistance systems. However, this decline will be more than offset by the creation of new jobs. The job gains will result from demand for highly skilled workers in IT, analytics, and R&D roles, as well as the creation of new jobs related to the type of revenue growth opportunities.

ADVANTAGES OF INDUSTRY 4.0:

The organization need to upscale their competitiveness by selecting and adopting the right strategy. The following list based on the relevance, cost-effectiveness, and impact on productivity makes up.

- Cloud Computing
- Big Data and Analytics
- Industrial Internet
- Remote Assistance
- Robots (auto + co-bots)
- Simulation
- Augmented reality

Industry 4.0 will likely be positive for the workforce. The number of physically demanding or risky jobs will decrease, while the number of jobs requiring flexible responses, problem solving, and customization will increase.

To perform effectively with Industry 4.0, workers will need to apply a variety of "hard" skills. They will have to "combine know-how related to a specific job or process with know-how for working with robots or changing tools on machines, with IT competencies that range from basic spreadsheeting and text editing to advanced (applied advanced programming and analytics skills). The need for multiple hard skills and the unprecedented scope of change on the shop floor mean that "soft skills" will become more important than ever. Employers will have to be even more open to change, possess greater flexibility to adapt to new roles and work environments, and are more accustomed to continual interdisciplinary learning.

Steps Forward for Industry 4.0:

To benefit from Industry 4.0 and win against global competition, it is necessary to successfully integrate the principles of Industry 4.0 with the "Make in India" initiative. To this end, the "Make in India" initiative offers an opportunity to develop innovative services not just for the Indian customer but can easily be modified to offer similar services to global customers. Developing and deploying these technology stacks across well-penetrated sectors like health and nutrition is now being more broadly based idea to encourage multi-national, as well as national companies to manufacture their products in India. This is focusing more on enabling policies and improving infrastructure for certain key sectors.

India is uniquely advantaged in scalable digital technologies. In financial services, it is building a unique, first-of-its-kind digital stack (known as the "India Stack") with Aadhaar, Jan Dhan, and accounts and various payment technologies such as UPI and the Aadhaar Payment Bridge which accounts for different development journey, which accounts for different global circumstances and legacy digital infrastructure. Our hypothesis is that digital technologies will power mass services just like industrial technologies powered mass manufacturing.

Various initiatives are being launched across the nation and India and other stakeholders in order to realize successful adoption of smart manufacturing concept without expediting the process of achieving goals of "Make in India." There is no doubt India has the opportunity to become one of the largest economies in the digital 21st century.
