HOW SKILL INDIA IS EMPowering WORKERS TO BECOME EMPLOYABLE?

Initiatives are underway to promote a culture of innovation based on entrepreneurship which can generate wealth and employment for all citizens.

Skills and knowledge drive economic growth and social development of a country. Nations with higher levels and better standards of skilled workforce are able to deal with challenges and opportunities in domestic and global markets.

India currently ranks among the fastest growing economies globally and is celebrating demographic dividend with two-thirds of 1.3 billion people under the age of 30 years. The country aspires to be an economic superpower and contribute about 25 per cent of the world’s total workforce by 2025.

On the other hand, 500 million skilled workers will be required in the next five years - especially in manufacturing. A big challenge lies ahead, however, as estimates show that only 4.69 per cent of the workforce has undergone formal skill training.

More worryingly, over 30 per cent of youth between 15 to 29 years are 'not in employment, education or training,' according to Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD).

‘Not in employment’ refers to those who are not searching for jobs either due to unavailability or because there are no jobs to match their skills.

With a million people entering workforce every month, India has embarked upon the world’s largest human resource development exercise. For the first time in 68 years of Independence, the Ministry of Skill Development and Entrepreneurship (MSDE) has been formed to focus on enhancing employability for the masses.

On July 15, 2015, Prime Minister Narendra Modi launched the ambitious Skill India initiative to empower youth from different sections of society for building a New India. The country has immense human capital and skill capital of the world with focus on employment generation enabled through Make in India and Skill India.

The MDSE has undertaken significant steps and reforms to drive this in terms of formalising the policy, framework and standards; launching new programs and schemes; creating new infrastructure and upgrading existing institutions; partnering with states; engaging with industries; and building societal acceptance and aspirations.

For a better tomorrow,

The initiatives are not just leading to real stories of transformation and achievements, but of hope and enlightenment as well for every young Indian a better tomorrow.

The National Policy on Skill Development - announced on July 15, 2015 - aims at creating an ecosystem of empowerment by skilling on a large scale at speed with high standards and promoting an atmosphere of innovation based on entrepreneurship which can generate wealth and employment to ensure sustainable livelihoods for all citizens.

To begin with, the MDSE held extensive discussions from October 2015 to September 2016 with various ministries and departments to gauge training needs in 34 sectors. The findings

Knowledge of language is the doorway to wisdom.

- Roger Bacon

Language is said to be the soul of human being. It is the most natural means of communicating what we feel and think. There is no gainsaying the fact that with the changing global scenario, especially in the post-transitional period of liberalization, privatization and globalization, the importance of foreign languages has been increasing.

The fast increase in the advent of multinational companies and the rapid rate of the investment by the Indian companies abroad, knowledge of foreign languages is reckoned as the passport of a host of career opportunities in the country and abroad as well.

Why learn a Foreign Language?

As per the latest trend of global job markets and corporate culture the demand for the professionals specialized in the following foreign languages may prove to be pretty high.

- English
- French
- German
- Italian
- Spanish
- Chinese
- Portuguese
- Japanese

Why learn a Foreign Language?

Learning foreign languages not only enriches our life style and enhances cultural ethos but also provides more career alternatives and better job experiences. We also succeed in having different perspectives and visions of life and the world around us. Our cognitive quality and life skills get very naturally improved. Getting a job at international level also helps us have a lucrative income, global perspective and international identity. We learn the art of cultural tolerance and religious adjustment with the people from different backgrounds. The horizon of our knowledge of art, literature, music, cinema, cult and cuisine gets broadened.

There is no escape that learning of foreign languages in the open economy of today’s globalized world provides a good career.

As per an international survey, there would be requirement of more than 1.5 million of foreign language experts in the coming two decades, especially when the multinational companies are fast mushrooming across the nations in the world. The foreign language professionals are expected to get recruited in various BPO, IT and KPO in India. These professionals may also be recruited in the companies out-sourced to India from the European countries.

For the better tomorrow, the initiatives are not just leading to real stories of transformation and achievements, but of hope and enlightenment as well for every young Indian a better tomorrow.

Background: the period of Prakrits and Classical (sanskrits) are (1) the Vedas, (2) the Vedangas, (3) the Upanishads, (4) the Bhagavad Gita, (5) the Mahabharata, (6) the Ramayana, and (7) the Ramcharitmanas by Tulsidas. The classical period of Hindi literature is divided into two main periods: the early modern period and the romantic period.

Mahatma Gandhi

India is a land of diverse languages. As a proverb goes, “Every two miles the water changes, every four miles the speech.” As per the 1961 Census, India has 1950 mother tongues, genetically belonging to five different language families. The 1991 Census revealed 10,400 new mothers tongues and they were rationalized into 1576 mother tongues. Further, the number of languages increased to 1600 by 2011. Today, there are about 22 scheduled languages as per the eighth schedule of the Constitution of India. These languages are (1) Assamese, (2) Bengali, (3) Gujarati, (4) Hindi, (5) Kannada, (6) Malayalam, (7) Marathi, (8) Tamil, (9) Telugu, (10) Urdu, (11) Odia, (12) Punjabi, (13) Rajasthani, (14) Sanskrit, (15) Tamil, (16) Telugu, (17) Urdu, (18) Marathi, (19) Telugu, (20) Santhali, (21) Maithili and (22) Dogri. Despite the diversity and complexity of the linguistic landscape in India, Hindi has emerged as the lingua franca in the country and is widely used as a language of communication across different regions of the country. Hindi has a long history, with its roots tracing back to the 10th century AD. The earliest form of Hindi, which can be traced back to the Brahmi script, is from the early centuries AD.

Modern Hindi literature emerges: 19th century

VishnuPriya Pandey

For all India intercourse we need, from among the Indian stock, a language which will express the thoughts of the whole number of people already known and understand and which otherwise the language can never be.

Hindi is spoken by millions in the north-west frontiers of India. It belongs to the branch of modern Indo-Aryan languages of the greater Indo-European family. Languages from Classical Sanskrit to Pali-Prakrit and Pali have passed through various stages of evolution over the period of time. The language that emerged was also referred to as Hindi, Hindustani and Khan-Boli, and is traced back to the 10th century AD. However, the literary history of the language can be traced back to the 12th century and in its modern incarnation Hindi is approximately 1200 years old. The issue of official language has been the subject of much debate since the independence of India. The Constitution of India (1949) does not contain any specific provisions regarding the Hindi language. However, the language has a significant place in the country's cultural and political life.

The earliest form of Hindi, which may be traced back to the 10th century AD, is the language of the Brahmans and the Brahmans' literature. This language, known as Apabhrahsa, was used for religious and political communication among the Indians. It had the potential of being a language spoken by the majority of the population, which could be adopted as the national language. In his address to the Constituent Assembly of India in December 1949, Jawaharlal Nehru addressed the language issue. He argued that the linguistic diversity of India made it impossible to unify the people and the nation through a single language. He proposed Hindi, a language spoken by the majority of the population, as the solution to this problem. Nehru stated that Hindi was the language of the majority and it had the potential to unite the people and the nation. The federal government of India, which was established in 1950, made Hindi the official language of the country along with English. The Constitution of India (1950) provides for the use of Hindi as the official language of the country. The Constitution also provides for the use of English as the auxiliary language of the country.

The issue of official language was deliberated in detail in the constituent assembly that decided that Hindi in Devanagari script should be adopted as the official language of the Union. This decision was based on the recommendation of the Constituent Assembly of India and the Official Language of the Union under Article 342(1). Part XVII of the Constitution of India deals with the official language of the Union and the issue of official language. Article 343 reads as follows:

The form of numerals to be used for the official purposes of the Union shall be the international form of Indian numerals.

Notwithstanding anything in clause (1), for a period of fifteen years from the commencement of this Constitution, the English language shall continue to be used for all official purposes of the Union for which it was being used immediately before such commencement.

Provided that the President may, during the said period, by order published in the Gazette of India, in the Official Language of the Union in addition to the English language and of the Devanagari form, specify any other language or any international form of Indian numerals for any of the official purposes of the Union.

(3) Notwithstanding anything in this article, Parliament may by law provide for the use of any language specified in clause (1) or clause (2) in the said period of fifteen years, of

(a) the English language, or

(b) the Devanagari form of numerals, or

(c) any other language or any international form of Indian numerals as may be specified in the law.

At the time of framing and adoption of this Constitution, it was envisaged that English will continue to be used for executive, judicial and legislative purposes for a period of fifteen years i.e. till 1965. Besides, it was provided that the President may, during the said period of fifteen years, by order published in the Gazette of India, in the Official Language of the Union for which it was being used immediately before such commencement, specify any other language or any international form of Indian numerals for any of the official purposes of the Union. Article 343(1) provides for the establishment of a Committee by the President on expiration of five years from the commencement of this Constitution and thereafter at the expiration of ten years from such commencement, which shall consist of a Chairman, one member representing the English language, one member representing the Hindi language and one member representing the language specified in clause (1) or clause (2) of this article, Parliament may by law provide for the use of any language specified in clause (1) or clause (2) in the said period of fifteen years of

(i) the English language, or

(ii) the Devanagari form of numerals, or

(iii) any other language or any international form of Indian numerals as may be specified in the law.

The rule of English continued to be prominent in the official communication of the government, and it was envisaged that Hindi would gradually become the official language of the country. However, in practice, the use of Hindi as the official language of the Union was slow and it was not until the 1960s that Hindi became the dominant language in official communication.
