SARDAR PATTEL: THE IRON MAN OF INDIA

Mohit Mishra

"We are building a nation and we are laying the foundations of One Nation, and those who choose to divide again and again the seeds of disruption will have no place, no quarter here, and I must say that plainly enough."

— Sardar Patel

Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel, popularly known as the Iron Man of Lakh Purush, is credited to shape up the territorial boundary of the independent India, making it a formidable Union of states. The visionary statesman played a significant role in shaping the destiny of the nation. With his political wisdom and praiseworthy act of unity, Sardar Patel laid the foundation of modern India. He was one of principal architects of Indian independence. When our country got independence in 1947, there were 565 princely states. Most of the Nawabs and Maharanis who ruled over these princely states dreamt of becoming independent rulers as British announced to quit India. In the midst of chaotic independence, they demanded equal status from the Government of India. Some of them even declared themselves independent and even planned to send their representatives to the United Nations. However, with his political acumen and foresight, Sardar Patel tackled the situation by consolidating the support of the subject of these princely states and making the rulers realize the impossibility of independence from Indian republic.

The Nawab of Junagadh, Muhammad Mahabat Khan III, decided to become part of Pakistan. The decision was against the popular will of his subject, majority of which were Hindus. On September 15, 1947, Junagadh acceded to the Dominion of Pakistan. The grave situation was tactfully handled by Sardar Patel who delayed that time to register the acceptance of the accession and to hold a plebiscite in Junagadh. He also ordered the annexation of three principalities of Junagadh. Eventually, the government of Junagadh invited India to take control. Subsequently, a plebiscite was conducted in which over 99 percent people chose India over Pakistan and the princely state became part of our nation. Likewise, he handled the merger of Hyderabad (Operation Polo) with carrot-and-stick approach which was backed up by swift army action. Enforced with the intimidating and massive task of unifying independent India, Sardar Patel successfully integrated all princely states. The India that we see today was a result of the tireless and determined efforts put in by Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel who is rightly hailed as India’s Bismarck.

Born on October 31, 1875 in Nadiad village of modern day Gujarat, Vallabhbhai Patel was the son of six his father’s children. His father had served in the army, and his mother, a simple housewife, was very spiritual. In 1891, he married Jhaverbai Patel. He completed his matriculation in 1897 in the age of 22 due to the poor financial condition of his family. He continued on page 2.

wanted to make a career in law. To pursue a degree in law Patel travelled to England and there he completed his law degree in 1913 from Inns of Court. Like many of his generation of political leaders, he qualified as a barrister and came back to India to start his law practice. He returned to India around the same time as Mahatma Gandhi returned from South Africa, on the eve of the World War I. Soon he became one of the most successful lawyers of Ahmedabad. British Government offered him many lucrative posts for his legal profligacy but as a staunch opponent of the colonial rule in India, he rejected all.

Sardar Patel came in contact of Mahatma Gandhi. Gandhi’s words deeply affected Vallabhbhai and he adopted Gandhian principies to be his staunch supporter. In 1917, Sardar Patel was elected as the Secretary of the Gujarat Sabha, the Gujarati wing of the Indian National Congress. He joined Gandhi in representing the weavers in the dispute will mill-owners in Ahmedabad in 1918. He was Gandhi’s chief lieutenant in his second satyagraha movement in Kheda. The peasants of Kheda were unable to pay high taxes because of crop failure and plague epidemic. Sardar Patel and his colleagues organised a major tax revolt. The revolt was astounding in terms of discipline and unity. Even when all their personal property, land and livelihood were seized, a vast majority of Kheda’s farmers remained firmly united in the support of Patel. The peaceful movement forced the British Government to seek to foster an honorourable agreement for both parties. In the end, Patel’s success was in question, and the next would be suspended, and the increase in rate reduced, while all confiscated property would be restored. Contributing the success of Kheda to Sardar Patel, Gandjhi wrote in his autobiography, “I will say that without the help of Vallabhbhai Patel, we should not have won the campaign.” In 1920, Sardar Patel was nominated and elected as the President of the Gujarat Pradesh Congress Committee. He served in the post till 1945. He actively supported the non-cooperation Movement launched by Gandhi. Patel was the first Prime Minister of the nation with, recruited over three lakh members and hoisted collect over Rs. 1.5 million in funds. He worked against alcoholism, Untouchability and caste discrimination in Gujarat. He was elected as the municipal president of Ahmedabad in 1922, 1924 and 1927. In 1923, when Mahatma Gandhi was in prison, he successfully led a satyagraha in Nagpur against a law banning the raising of the Indian flag. This movement gave him a countrywide recognition. Later, Dr. Rajendra Prasad, who became the first President of independent India, wrote about him, “I met Sardar earlier too. But in Nagpur, I had a close interaction with him, one of the most chanished memories of my life. At that time, there was great respect for his work-efficiency, seriousness and leadership power in my heart.”

In 1926, the farmers of Bardoli again faced a problem of “tax-hike”. After prolonged summons, when the farmers refused to pay the extra tax, the government seized their lands in retaliation. The agitation took on for more than six months. After several rounds of negotiations by Patel, a great portion of the farmers after a deal was struck between the government and farmers’ representatives. It was here that he earned the title ‘Sardar’. Sardar Patel was elected as the President of Indian National Congress in 1931. The Karachi session presided by Patel was an important event in India’s struggle for independence. The Gandhi - Lenin pact was endorsed in this session and Gandhi was nomi-rated to represent Congress in the Second Round Table Conference. A resolution on Fundamental Rights and Economic Policy was also adopted which represented the Party’s Social, Economic and Political programme. It was later known as Karachi Resolution. The resolution, for the first time, tried to define what would be the meaning of Swaraj for common people. The 4th Congress Session also felt the onioning of the Congress about the affairs in the states. As the President of the Congress Session, he indicated that the princess would not take all uncompromising attitude and join the proposed federation, and it would be possible to seek direct representation of the states people in the federal legislature.

Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel was a decisive role in the Constituent Assembly and remained the key person in the setting up of landmark provisions of Indian principles. He played an important role in the drafting of the constituent draft. Patel made recommendations for the appointment of Dr. Bhiram Rao Ambekdarker. He was also instrumental for the entry of eminent jurist like B N Rau, K M Munshi, Axlal Krishna Bajrangi and Gulabramani Aiyar into the Assembly. Some of the basic tenets of the Constitution, particularly the balancing of fundamental rights with the maintenance of law and order in the state, and the reservation of a whole set of citizens rights as non-justifiable directives of the state were evolved by Patel. After adopting the Objectives Resolution, moved by Nehru, the Congress Assembly appointed an advisory committee under Patel on January 24, 1947. The committee dealt with the rights of different minorities, tribal and excluded areas. Patel presented the committee with a series of practical measures designed to strengthen India’s position: accelerated road building in the frontier areas, strengthening of India’s military capabilities, moves to bring in ‘long term immigrants into India’.

On the economy, while Nehru was a socialist with a firm belief in state-led industrialization, Patel believed in Gandhian self-sufficiency and was an advocate of private capital. Patel argued against nationalism of industrial policy, that could significantly undermine the liberal industrial policy resolution of 1946.

Sardar Patel, by integrating more than 560 princely states, prevented Balkanization of India and gave it a geographical coherence. He had a vision to make India a strong nation of the world and he relentlessly strived till last breath to make it prosperous and united. Patel suffered a massive heart attack and he died on 15 December 1950 at Birla House in Bombay. His cremation was initially planned at Girgaum Chow-patty, but the venue was changed to Sonapur (currently at Marine Lines). This was done on the request of his daughter, when she conveyed that it was his wish to be cremated like a common man in the same place as his wife and mother were earlier cremated. He was given Bharat Ratna in 1951 by the Narasimha Rao government. The present Narendra Modi Government has started observing the birth anniversary of Sardar Patel on October 31 every year as National Unity Day or Rashtriya Ekta Diwas. ‘Run For Unity’ is organised across the country, involving people from all sections of society. All the Government Offices, Public Sector Undertakings and other Public Institutions arrange a pride walking ceremony to observe the Rashtriya Ekta Diwas. Talking about the Iron Man of India, Prime Minister Narendra Modi has said, “Through his skill, vision and love for the nation, Sardar Patel integrated the country. We can never forget his contribution.”

As the nation will celebrate the 142nd birth anniversary of Sardar Patel on October 31, 2017, it is time to recall his unparalleled contribution to India’s unity and to utilise it as an opportunity to reaffirm the inherent strength and resilience of our nation to withstand the actual and potential threats to the unity, integrity and security of our country.

CORRIGENDUM

The Board had released an advertisement in the Employment News dated 5-11 August, 2017 inviting applications for filling up the one post of Deputy Director reserved for Persons with Disabilities (OH category). However, in the column of Educational Qualification and Experience, an oblique has been inserted due to an oversight in between Agriculture/Economics, whereas the actual required qualification is Agriculture Economics. Therefore, this corrigendum is being issued for the information of the applicants that the qualification inter-alia be read as Agriculture Economics and not Agriculture/Economics as mentioned in the earlier advertisement.

ADMN. OFFICER
A Zoologist needs:

Skills required

- A Zoologist must possess a scientific mind and be conversant with animal welfare.
- An interest in animal and the environment.

Inter-personal, communication and managerial skills will be an added asset.

ZOO

Zoology as a career has a number of specializations because of which the students are presented with a plethora of career options once they choose to be associated with this field.

The field is concerned with the preservation and management of the animal kingdom and a career in it would mean that you are a part of that responsibility.

Since zoology is both descriptive and analytical, it can be approached either as a basic science or as an applied science.

A worker in basic zoology is interested in knowledge of animals for its own sake, while workers in applied zoology would be interested in information that will directly benefit human beings.

Some of the organizations that hire people who have studied Zoology are: Zoos, Wildlife services, Botanical Gardens, Conserva- tion organizations, National parks, Nature reserves, Universities, laboratories etc. Various options available to zoologists are: Zooleader/Guy/ Zookeeper/ Zoo Curator/ National Parks/ Wildlife Sanctuary Managers

Guided tours or exhibits. Wildlife Rehabilitator

These zoologists help in wild animal rescue and disease care. They also help in re-introducing animals back into the wild environment.

Animal Behaviourist

Animal Behaviourists are usually trained in Ethology, the study of animal behavior. Hence, they can train zoologists and other zoo employees to interact better with animals.

Researchers

Large number of zoologist work in animal research, studying nutrition, breeding, behavior, and management of domesticated and wild animals. There are many government research organizations conducting a variety of studies, such as the Zoological Survey of India, the Indian Council for Forestry Research & Education, the Wildlife Institute, Dehra Dun, as well as medical research establishments that conduct serious, serious animal experimentation goes on.

Enviroment & Ecology

Zoologists can work in the area of the environment and ecology, protecting natural resources and minimizing harm to plant and animal populations. The study of wild animals helps us learn to better protect endangered species.

Chemical and pharmaceutical industry

Zoologists also work in chemical or pharmaceutical companies or industrial organizations to test new products or pesticides and fertilizer on animals or humans, ways to produce healthier animals and more animals for our food supply, or to increase fish farming. In the pharmaceutical sector, zoologists specialize in microbiology research and study organisms that cause diseases in humans, animals as well as plants, developing antibiotics and developing vaccines, and manufacturing drugs.

Film and media

Zoologists also work in creative fields and the news media. They are writers, photographers, or illustrators, and film-makers. Clay-mation, Cinematography, National Geographic, Animal Planet, Discovery Channel are in constant need of Zoologists for research and writing. An animal lover!
